Reader's Advisory Read about an important new digital collection below.

Documenting Art Collections in Gilded Age New York, the fourth phase of the digital project Documenting the Gilded Age, provides public access to rare historical catalogs from the Frick Art Reference Library through digital facsimiles and an online exhibition. Thanks to grant funding from the Metropolitan New York Library Council (METRO), seventy-nine volumes documenting New York Gilded Age art collections are now available in digital form, and may be accessed via Arcade (the catalog of the New York Art Resources Consortium), OCLC WorldCat, Art Discovery Group Catalogue, the Internet Archive, and the Getty Research Portal. In the near future, these digital publications will also be discoverable through the Digital Public Library of America. An accompanying online exhibition featuring a video introduction by Inge Reist, director of the Center for the History of Collecting at the Frick Collection, highlights the research value of these catalogs.
