The Kingdom of Sicily Image Database (kos.aahvs.duke.edu

_____) collects historic drawings, paintings, engravings and photographs that depict the medieval monuments and cities of South Italy that were erected between c. 1100 and c. 1450 CE. The images are gathered from museums, libraries, archives, and publications; for the most part they depict monuments prior to destruction or significant alteration as a result of wars, earthquakes, extensive restoration, and simple neglect. The dates of the images range from the late sixteenth through the mid-twentieth centuries. A number of images show damage from WWII bombardment. The database includes location maps and a "slide show" feature to enable travelers and scholars to locate monuments in large cities such as Naples or Palermo, as well as to compare historic images of specific sites.
